Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The one-story, three bay wide vernacular house has recently undergone alterations with the addition of aluminum or vinyl siding. The front gable, two rooms deep house has a half-gabled roof intersecting the main elevation, creating a porch. The porch roof is constructed of a metal standing seam roof. A small wood shed with a metal roof is located at the rear of the property.

Prince George's County relied on its agricultural roots for its economic growth through the early half of the 20th century. Most of southern Prince George's County remained rural around the turn of the century. The county's position as one of the largest tobacco growers in Maryland and the increasing diversification of the crops grown to be sent to the urban markets allowed for a family to be supported by agricultural means. Its population between 1910 and 1930 rose from 36,000 to almost 60,000 people, but its population growth was primarily limited to the settlements of the new towns and villages brought about by the Baltimore and Potomac rail lines. The villages around the rail lines became the economic and social centers for the rural communities throughout the southern section of Prince George's County.
